I would like to add my input on the proceeding 04-233. I really enjoy positive radio stations, including Air 1. I like them because their positive messages help people make positive changes in their lives. There are many stories of people who used to be addicted to drugs and alcohol who have turned their lives around because of the message that these positive Christian radio stations provide. With these stations, people have a chance for change, and that change makes positive impacts on society as a whole. Messages of peace and love are good ones, so they should be allowed to continue.

I am concerned that if this proceeding were to go through, people would get mixed messages on what is ok and what is not. There are many radio stations, some are liberal and some are conservative, so there is no reason to make all radio stations the same, with mixed messages, and not allowing anyone to really make their point. I believe that people should be able decide what stations they want to listen to, instead of making all stations allow all points of view. I believe that in America, freedom of speech means freedom of speech for all people, not just for those who are not Christians. Just as conservative views offend some people, liberal views also offend some. Therefore, allow people to have their differences and have their own stations to listen to.

I also believe that the radio stations are doing fine right now, as they are. They don't need a governing board, making decisions and rules for that station. Each station should already have some form of board of members, with people who are passionate about their own station. This is much better than allowing outside sources to govern something that they really don't care about.

I also believe that there shouldn't be a regulation for number of staff that each station needs to have, or when they need to work or not work. Each station is a business and those decisions should be left to those who are part of that business.

Please leave things as they are. These radio stations are making positive changes in communities all around the world.
